

Commercial overlays critical for future growth

TED EVERETT
Economic Development Officer

One of the last things Jim Town worked on with Economic Development Council Chairman Terry Ellis and I is the 10-year Economic Development plan for Washington County. This plan is very ambitious and takes a hard look at having the right infrastructure for the County for the next 10-20 years.

In creating this plan, we looked at the studies, many supported by the EDC, that the County produced over the last several years. We recognized and learned through the Hwy 77 and 79 Corridor Project experience that commercial overlays do matter in the planning and zoning process. We address this issue within the strategic plan by working with the County Planning and Zoning Department. Below are highlights of a few of the new initiatives discussed and included within the EDC strategic plan.

Updated County Comprehensive Plan, Land Development Code, and FLUM

Status: Currently underway with a $300,000 grant.

- New Initiative: By working with the County Planning Department, ensure that land use planning and land use categories are created for the next decade to accommodate anticipated growth and expand existing land use categories to provide better control of specific site uses rather than general commercial or single family residential.

- Provide for modern planning for higher density multi-family, apartments, and condominiums where infrastructure exists. Expand the use of “intent overlays” with significant mixed-use allocations.

- Create an industrial intent overlay to connect the Chipley and County industrial parks generally along the trace of the FDOT “East Bypass” that also includes some mixed use and commercial areas.

- Update the County portion of the Hwy 79 Corridor Authority overlay to provide additional mixed use and commercial sites.

Before you think the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) is planning an East Bypass, know they are not studying or it is not in their five-year plan at this time. The thought is should it ever happen, it will most likely be somewhere along the path the FDOT studied years ago, hence start planning for the future when it may come to pass.

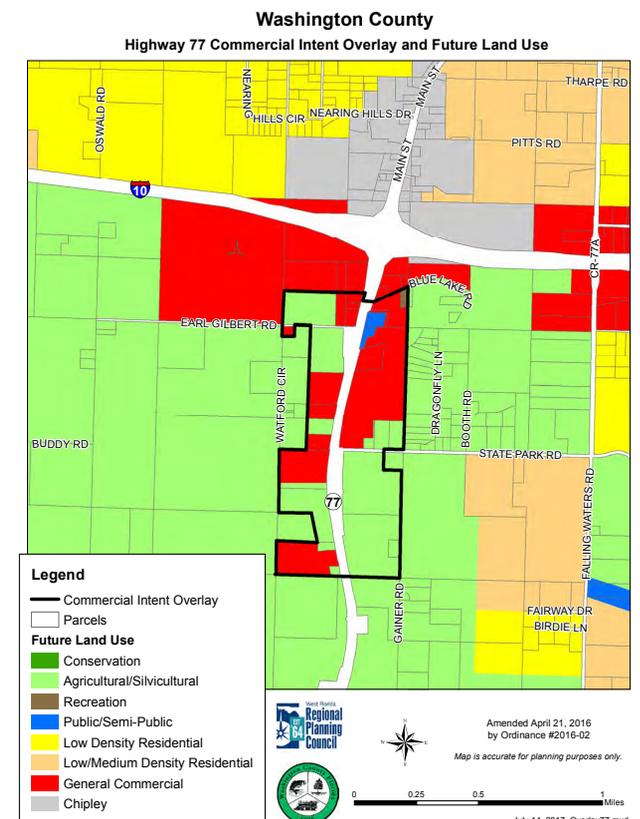

As expressed earlier in the article, we learned a lot about using the overlay intents. By using this tool and pre-designating the areas where the county wants growth and where there is infrastructure, it shows potential developers looking at our future use map and comp plan where we want them to go.

This means pre-planning has been done in the overlay area and their developmental time is shorter – they can be in business sooner than later. We address this within District 2 in the following new initiative:

New Initiative: The Commercial Intent Overlay south of I-10 needs to be expanded approximately 1-mile further south along both sides of Hwy 77, and perhaps expanded both east and west of Hwy 77, with an emphasis on multiple intents for commercial, industrial, mixed use, residential (low to high density) and funds sought by the County to extend the wastewater lines to the full extent of the revised overlay.

This strategic plan was worked on and fleshed out over four months. It is very thorough and will take time and money to fulfill. The cost of doing nothing and not following this plan will have major negative implications for the future of growth for Washington County.

Washington County Registered Voters: If you do want to sign the Advance Washington County petition to place the vote on a ballot so YOU can decide the future, please send in your petition immediately.

A Message from the President

I can tell I am getting older, because time isn't what it used to be. We are three quarters of the way through 2021, and 2022 is barreling down on us.

My hopes, as we approach the end of this year and the beginning of next year, is that this horrible virus is better kept at bay, and we have more than two days in a row of dry weather. The loss of life has been devastating throughout our community, state, and country, but I am hopeful that we are on the back end of the outbreak. As we know from 2020 until now, all of that can change very quickly.

As I write this, the Chamber is still working towards our economic development initiative through Advance Washington County. This initiative, along with the extension of water and sewer below I-10, should excite the residents of the future of Washington County.

Our local government is driven by tax revenues.

These revenues are brought in by sales tax and property taxes to name a few. Being able to bring new businesses into our county would only help our local government, law enforcement, and other budgeted offices that rely on annual funding derived from those revenues.

It could also, one day, maybe, reduce our personal property taxes, which I am sure would come to delight of all residents.

A Message from the Executive Director

Rain, rain and more rain. It is almost as if we are living through a monsoon season. It feels like that at work as well. I do not remember a time that we are so busy here at the Chamber.

Advance Washington County is collecting petitions in order to create a referendum on the consumption of alcohol that would be done sometime in December of this year or early January 2022.

As many see this issue, it is about economic development. If the referendum comes to a vote and passed, it could bring in more opportunities to the County for larger restaurant chains and no more than three package stores to open.

Did you know that your larger truck stops will not even come to a dry county? By remaining dry, we are hindering ourselves from attracting these types of businesses and not realizing the tax revenues that would come to the county.

Many go to Jackson County or Holmes County to purchase wine and spirits and the taxes on the sale of these spirits stay in the county in which they are purchased.

TED EVERETT
Executive

We have heard from many in our county who would like these businesses – and revenues – to stay in our county. For this reason the Advance Washington County PAC was set up.

We think it should be the decision of the voters to decide what they want. The only way to do this is have enough petitions signed and certified by the Supervisor of Elections in order to do the referendum so YOU the voter can have your say. As many of you know, the community has lost two community leaders in the past few months. First we lost James Town and recently we lost Ole Ellis. Both of these men gave so much of their time and efforts to many organizations, communities and the development of the County. I am very fortunate to have known both of them extremely well and had the opportunity to not only learn from them, but recognize how their efforts, and those on their team, affected us in a good way.

TDC to launch virtual visitor center

HEATHER LOPEZ
TDC Director

The Washington County Tourist Development Council (TDC) is excited to announce it will be launching a virtual visitor center in the spring of 2022. This creates a digital tool that can be taken advantage of 24/7, 365 days a year by visitors and residents alike.

There are many challenges faced by physical visitor centers. For one, the new millennial generation of travelers prefer to get their information digitally. Two, being a small rural county, the TDC cannot staff the center for nights and weekends. And three, during the pandemic some travelers don't feel comfortable being inside of the visitor center to collect information or ask questions about the area. A virtual center solves all of these.

The site will feature an interactive business directory, a travel resource section and four custom itineraries showcasing special themes in the county to encourage exploration. The business directory section will be a tiled listing of all businesses/locations that are tourist related in the county. This list will be able to be filtered, only showing what the visitor has searched for. Once the search is complete, the visitor can click on an individual business listing to bring up additional information such as contact info, a Google Map, Google Reviews and places nearby.

All listings will use Google Places and the Google algorithm technology ensuring all information on the site will be automatically updated as the business updates it's information through Google. This will also be advantageous after natural disasters as well as during pandemics when business operations change frequently. The travel resource section will be the home of all digital guides and brochures for the county as well as listing events throughout the year. The itineraries section will include an interactive Google Map with each custom itinerary with the option to print the itinerary to take with you on the road.

The site will be fully integrated into the original TDC website, which will improve performance and Google ranking. Signage will be produced and placed at locations throughout the county, encouraging guests to use the virtual site to find locations and explore more options while they are in the county. Visitors will simply need to use the QR code on the signage to go straight to the virtual center. They will also be able to access the site through the TDC website by clicking on the button at the top of the home page.

The TDC hopes this product will benefit travelers by creating an easy, interactive visitor center experience on the go that can enhance the services already offered by the physical visitor center. For more information, please contact the TDC office at (850) 638-6013.

NFCH honors Janet Kinney for more than forty years of service

CAROL KENT WYATT
Washington County News

What began as what she thought would be a temporary job culminated for Janet Kinney in August with a retirement celebration to honor her nearly 45 years of service to Northwest Florida Community Hospital.

Kinney began her career in February 1977 as a switchboard operator.

Through the years, she has held many positions at the hospital, including materials manager, in data processing, administrative assistant to the Director of Nursing, purchasing agent, marketing director, director of clinical services, and purchasing manager. She has also served as interim CEO for both NFCH and the facility's sister hospital, Calhoun-Liberty Hospital in Blountstown. She retired this month as NFCH Chief Operating Officer.

"I was simply going to work part time for a few months," reflects Kinney. "I walked into the front lobby of the old hospital and asked if there were any jobs available at the switchboard. I started working that day. But every day, it grew on me, and I really started to love what I was doing."

Kinney, beloved by both hospital staff and members of the community, was honored with a reception in the event room at the NFCH Specialty Center – a room that she learned will soon be officially named the Janet Kinney

JANET KINNEY

Education Center as a nod to her years of dedication to the hospital, its staff, and the patients it serves.

NFCH CEO Michael Kozar made the announcement, noting Kinney's passion for her work.

"There are no words or descriptions that can describe the dedication and commitment that Janet has given to this organization," said Kozar. "More times than not, Janet worked seven days a week to ensure that our staff had what was needed to take care of our patients. She always put the staff and the patients before herself."

"There is not a nook or cranny of this organization that Janet has not touched," he added. "The knowledge acquired as she accumulated these years could never be duplicated. Janet Kinney is the ultimate team player, and NFCH has been blessed to have her on our team."

Kozar points to Kinney's efforts for many of the hospital's successes over the years – as well as for helping ensure growth for Calhoun-Liberty Hospital, where Kinney has served twice as interim CEO.

"Without her work at Calhoun Liberty post Hurricane Michael, working with the state of Florida, FEMA, DEO, and many other organizations, that community couldn't be in a position today to be building a new hospital," he said. "Her work made that new hospital possible."

Among many milestones Kinney has helped see to fruition for NFCH are the renovation projects for both the emergency room and the 2nd floor, helping acquire generators for the hospital which proved prudent when the facility found itself running on generator power for ten days following Hurricane Michael, and helping grow the hospital's physician practices to where they are now, logging more than 55,000 clinic visits a year.

Most recently, Kinney helped the hospital and the community navigate testing and treatment during the COVID-19 pandemic, helping make the gold standard of COVID-19 testing – polymerase

Ole Ellis remembered as economic visionary

CAROL KENT WYATT
Washington County News

Washington County lost one of its most prolific leaders in economic development with September's passing of O.L. "Ole" Ellis, Jr.

Ellis, 85, passed away Sunday, September 12, leaving behind a legacy of leadership and service.

Ellis' first career was that of military service. He was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the U.S. Army following his graduation from the University of Southern Mississippi, where he earned a marketing degree and was honored as a Distinguished Military Graduate. He went on to become a pilot and serve in staff and command positions around the U.S., Europe, and Vietnam, serving two tours in Vietnam during the Vietnam War and earning the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal (1967), and the Bronze Star before retiring in 1979.

Ellis then began a second career as Executive Director of the Washington County Chamber of Commerce and quickly made his mark as an economic leader and visionary.

"Ole Ellis was more than a community leader," said current Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Ted Everett. "He was a mentor to many, who also gave his energy, his time, and his effort to many organizations within Washington County. Ole stood out to me because of his faith, his character, and his willingness to take his time to help move Washington County forward."

Among those efforts was Ellis' work to create economic new initiatives.

He helped establish the Chipley Development Agency in 1985, and later, the county's enterprise zones, which targeted specific sites for economic revitalization through tax abatements and other incentives before sunsetting in 2015.

Ellis also served twice as Chipley's Interim City Manager and alongside fellow economic leader John Dougherty, was instrumental in bringing WestPoint Home (then WestPoint Pepperell), Walmart, and the Northwest Florida Reception Center to the county.

Ellis' commitment to economic growth didn't stop at the boundaries of Northwest Florida, however. He served on the board for the Florida Economic Development Council and helped rural communities gain more equal footing with urban areas as a founding member of the Rural Issues Working Group. Through that group's efforts, legislation was passed under former Governor Jeb Bush to designate fiscally distressed counties as Rural Area of Critical Economic Concern, a designation that helps counties like Washington County qualify and rank higher for consideration in the grant process.

The Chamber of Commerce established an award more than a decade ago to honor Ellis' enterprising spirit. Titled the "Ole Ellis Washington County Lifetime Community Leadership Award," the award is given intermittently to individuals for outstanding work and dedication to moving Washington County forward. Appropriately, Ellis himself was the award's inaugural recipient.

O.L. "Ole" Ellis, Jr.

Fellow Washington County economic leader and current Chairman of the Florida Public Service Commission Gary Clark says Ellis had a "servant's heart."

"When I say he had a servant's heart, I mean he lived to see his community, his family, and the people around him grow and prosper," said Clark. "He always wanted to make a difference. He wanted to be a catalyst for making this community a better place live and work and he never care who got the credit."

Ellis was married to his high school sweetheart, Bertha "Bebe" (Chunn) Ellis for 64 years. In addition to Bertha, Ellis is survived by their children: Chris Ellis, Terry Ellis, Derek Ellis, and Rachel Ellis Belser, as well as 11 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

"Dad was a champion for serving and making a difference for this community," reflected Terry Ellis. "No matter what you do, it wasn't a question of if you served; it was to figure out your place and how to serve. He did this in this family, his community – in so many ways. He served and went above and beyond."

Florida Panhandle Technical College unveils new ambulance simulator

DIANE M. ROBINSON
Washington County News

Florida Panhandle Technical College unveiled their new ambulance simulator at a ribbon cutting on Monday, August 9.

The simulator was purchased with Governors Emergency Education Relief (GEER) grant funding.

The ambulance simulator cost $80,000 along with an additional $17,000 for a fully functioning trauma patient simulator named HAL.

College officials state both simulators are a boon for FPTC with the ambulance being the only one of its kind in the area. The ambulance has airbags underneath to simulate real roads and real life conditions that students will face on the job.

FPTC Director Larry Moore checks out the college's new patient simulator, "HAL."

HAL has the capability to do all the things the human body does, with actions recorded to a DVR that can track each student's progress to help them learn from mistakes as well as reinforce best practices.

Officials also state that the simulators helps students

Public Safety Coordinator Brandon Stevenson says it will take training to the next level. "Having these tools will enable us to teach our students in a way we couldn't before," said Stevenson. "This provides real time training with state-of-the-art equipment."

KINNEY

chain reaction (PCR) – an in-house service available in Chipley.

“She nearly single handedly created a molecular lab at NFCH that has processed tens of thousands of COVID tests in our community,” said Kozar.

But just as adept as Kinney is at making the big things happen, she has never forgotten that it’s the most basic of duties that are vital to the hospital’s success. Her peers note that Kinney’s job description has few limits.

“I think she has done everything in this hospital but work as a doctor,” mused Dr. Annette Porter. “She would get in the kitchen and cook, clean bathrooms, and also run the hospital administratively. She knows everything and has done every job here. She has been the backbone of this place forever and has an incredible heart for this community. There’s no way we can adequately thank her.”

Dr. Gabriel Berry agrees.

“Janet is just behind the scenes and makes the hospital go,” he said. “She doesn’t seek any attention, but if there’s anything you need to make happen or anything you need done, she’s the one who makes it happen. She’s the answer to any question.”

Marcey Black, who served as CFO/Director of Accounting during Kinney’s tenure, called her a problem solver.

“She’s probably the most hard-working person I’ve ever known – most dedicated for sure,” said Black. “If we were short on housekeeping staff, I’ve seen Janet grab a cart and get to work. Any position, she worked it there.”

Former NFCH materials manager Shane Blackburn credits Kinney for a lot of his professional growth.

“We worked in tandem, we’re a lot like family,” said Blackburn. “I worked for her for 22 years, initially as warehouse clerk when she was materials manager. As she moved up, I did, too. She was often the first one there and the last to leave. I owe her much for my well-being and career development.”

As much as Kinney loved her work family, she also took the time to have a family of her own with husband, Lane. The couple raised three children – Megan, Kaitlin, and Colt – and she is able to weather the tough times only to come out better than it has been ever before,” said Everett.

“To many, it would be surprising just how large of an impact this singular act had on our hospital and all rural hospitals. It truly forced our hospital to seek other ways to make ends meet. It was the executive leadership team of which Janet was a part that found new programs, new ways to expand the care the hospital could offer our community.”

Kinney’s community efforts through the Chamber of Commerce were far reaching, earning her the award for Chamber Member of Year in 2017.

“I have witnessed the love and concern she exudes for each and every person at the hospital,” enjoying life as a grandmother to Luke.

Megan Kinney says she has plenty of memories of growing up around her mom’s extended family.

“I literally grew up in that hospital,” she said. When I was just a few weeks old, I was in a bassinet in my mom’s office. Without a doubt, we all learned our work ethic from her.”

Long-time friend, Washington County Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Ted Everett, says Kinney’s work ethic benefited not only her family and NFCH, but the community as well.

“Because of her leadership, absolute knowledge of every aspect of the hospital, the hospital was he added. “Their problem was her problem to help solve, and she did that with smarts, compassion, firmness, and sound counseling.”

Kinney says while she is sure she will still be around on a limited basis to help the hospital with future endeavors, she does have a few thoughts to leave with her NFCH family.

“Keep the patient in front of you and live the purpose of healing and caring for others. That’s the reason why we are in healthcare,” she said.

“And I hope you know I’ll always be your biggest fan and will look and celebrate every achievement in the future – because there’s a lot coming.”
